Aschoff Stress-Test: BioPatch by SWISS HARMONY

17.04.2016

The Aschoff-Test is an approved test method protected by patent in the Federal Patent Department of Germany. In the Aschoff-Test the skin resistance of the ten ting points of the proband`s left hand are metered with a device called the BIO OHM TESTER.

The higher the skin resistance data is, the worse is the bio-energetical condition of the proband.

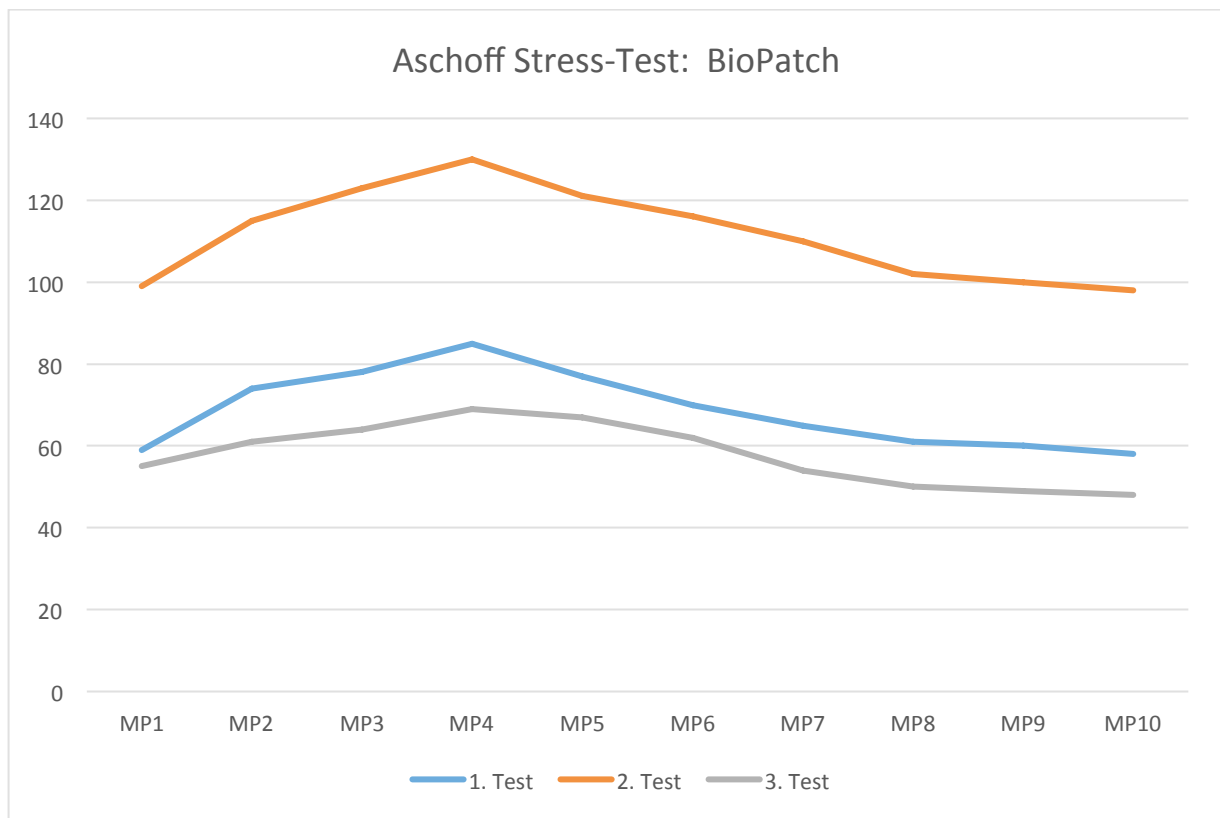

The standard value of a healthy person runs at about 40 kilo ohm. But this value is generally not achieved. Usually the value is up to 60 - 70 kilo ohm.

MP 1 - 10 are the 10 metering points on the fingers.

The first measurement is taken without putting any strain on the proband. (blue line in the graph)

The second measurement is taken with added strain on the proband but without the BioPatch. (red line in the graph)

The third measurement is taken with added strain on the proband but with the BioPatch. (grey line in the graph)

The outcome:

The first reading already shows the proband's (21 years old male) exposure to pathogenic sources of irritation, because the measured data is above the normal standard of 40 kilo ohm. These sources have been traced back to electromagnetic fields, which is no surprise, because the proband is a student of computer sciences, who is spending 12 hours daily in front of his computer.

At the second reading the proband is exposed to extensive electromagnetic contamination in form of the high frequency radiation from two mobile phones and the low frequency electromagnetic field of a current-carrying electrical wire. The red line in the graph shows a significant increase of the skin resistance, which implies a strong health risk.

The measured data of the third reading is unexpected low even though the proband is still exposed to the same electromagnetic contamination as at the second reading -- but with the difference of having the BioPatch stuck onto his headphone set. This allows only one conclusion:

The BioPatch made by SWISS HARMONY generates a healthful energy field, which completely neutralizes the bad effects from electromagnetic energy fields (E-smog). The BioPatch by SWISS HARMONY is a very valuable bio-energetic device.
